DEBBIE

(enters apartment, Danny is sitting in chair. It's very late) Dan?

DANNY

In here. (pause) I'm sorry. It just isn't working out.

DEBBIE

Here we go. Just say it Dan.

DANNY

What?

DEBBIE

Just say what you're going to say.

DANNY

(long pause) I think one of us should move out.

DEBBIE

(long pause) I do too.

DANNY

I'm sorry.

DEBBIE

What?

DANNY

I said, I'm sorry.
DEBBIE

For what? What are you sorry for?

DANNY

I'm sorry that it didn't work out. I just need some time.

DEBBIE

What? What the hell is that supposed to mean? You know you started out real strong, but now you're finishing like a wimp. Why didn't you just quit while you were ahead?

DANNY

That's what I'm trying to do.

DEBBIE

Oh God. (pause) I know why I'm leaving. What's your story? What killed it for you? The radical change in your lifestyle? Decided you wanted to travel light?

DANNY

Oh c'mon Debbie.

DEBBIE

Or is it just because you were afraid somebody better might come along and you'd be stuck with me?

DANNY

Why can't you just see this for what it is?

DEBBIE
And what is it?

DANNY

What it is. Nothing more, nothing less.

DEBBIE

Oh what? Two people who are committed to fucking until they get sick of each other? Oh, that's great. That's really special.

DANNY

Look, I don't want marriage. I don't want kids. I don't want to be tied down. (Long pause) I'm not happy. I...don't...love you...anymore.

DEBBIE

Fine. I'm gone. It's done. And you can go back to whatever it is you want to do, with whoever it is you want to do it with.

DANNY

Hey! (gets up out of the chair) You leave here knowing that I never cheated on you. Not once!

DEBBIE

Well, just give the boy a medal. I didn't realize it was such a sacrifice.
